Presentation Of The Lord

February 1 & 2, 2014

Theme: Mary and Joseph bring Jesus to the Temple, in fulfillment of Jewish Law. Simeon and Anna believed, through the Holy Spirit, that they would see the Messiah. Malachi prophesied that the Lord would come to his temple. Saint Paul tells us that we too are God's temples, temples of the Holy Spirit. When Jesus says "Here am I," are we aware, as Simeon and Anna were, of his presence? We experience Jesus in the Word, in the Eucharist, and in the Sacred. Our challenge is to become conscious of Jesus with us: in the quiet and the bustle of our days, in the turmoil and the peace of our world, in the storms and the calm of nature, in our tears and our hopes, in our deepest despair and our every joy.

STEWARDSHIP A DISCIPLE'S RESPONSE

Introduction

In some ways it may be harder to be a Christian steward today than at times in the past. Although religious faith is a strong force in the lives of many North Americans, our country's dominant secular culture often contradicts the values of the Judaeo-Christian tradition. This is a culture in which destructive "isms"—materialism, relativism, hedonism, individualism, consumerism—exercise seductive, powerful influences. There is a strong tendency to privatize faith, to push it to the margins of society, confining it to people's hearts or, at best, their homes, while excluding it from the marketplace of ideas where social policy is formed and men and women acquire their view of life and its meaning.

THE CHALLENGE

THE CHOICE

Christians are part of this culture, influenced by it in many ways. In recent decades many Catholics in particular have entered into the mainstream of American society. That has been a remarkable achievement. Often, though, this process also has widened the "split" between faith and life which Vatican II saw as one of "the more serious errors of our age" (Gaudium et Spes, no. 43). Thus American Catholicism itself has taken on some of the less attractive values of the secular culture.

For example, although religious people often speak about community, individualism infects the religious experience of many persons. Parishes, dioceses, and church institutions appear impersonal and alienating in the eyes of many. Evangelization is not the priority it should be. How to use people's gifts and charisms, how to empower the laity, how to recognize the role of women, how to affirm racial, cultural, and ethnic minorities, how to overcome poverty and oppression—these and countless other issues remain vexing questions, as well as opportunities. Also while many Catholics are generous in giving of themselves and their resources to the Church, others do not respond to the needs in proportion to what they possess. The result now is a lack of resources which seriously hampers the Church's ability to carry out its mission and obstructs people's growth as disciples.

This pastoral letter recognizes the importance of church support, including the sharing of time, talent, and treasure. But it situates church support in its broader context—what it means to be a disciple of Jesus Christ. This also is the context of stewardship. Generous sharing of resources, including money, is central to its practice, and church support is a necessary part of this. Essentially, it means helping the Church's mission with money, time, and personal resources of all kinds. This sharing is not an option for Catholics who understand what membership in the Church involves. It is a serious duty. It is a consequence of the faith which Catholics profess and celebrate.

This pastoral letter initiates a long-term, continuing process encouraging people to examine and interiorize stewardship's implications. At the start of this process it is important to lay out a comprehensive view of stewardship—a vision of a sharing, generous, accountable way of life rooted in Christian discipleship—which people can take to heart and apply to the circumstances of their lives. Concentrating on one specific obligation of stewardship, even one as important as church support, could make it harder—even impossible—for people to grasp the vision.
