Thirteen Sunday in Ordinary Time

June 27 & 28, 2015

Lord, touch and heal us. In today's reading, he takes Jairus' daughter by the hand and she is brought back to life. Such a simple gesture and such a great blessing. Jesus is also not afraid to be touched, as we see with the woman cured. She dares to approach Jesus and is rewarded for her courage by being made whole. We all need the courage to touch and be touched - to have faith and yearn to go beyond ourselves to encounter someone sacred, someone divine.

Blessed Sacrament Parish is pleased to announce that effective June 1, 2015 we have completed the screening process for a total of 112 persons with files for the "Protocol For Responsible Parish Ministry" (Adult men=37.5%, Adult women=47.3%, Youth=15.2%). During the screening process, four people have moved out of the province or to another city, two people did not pass the screening process. Going forward, we are now in a maintenance mode to process ministry changes or add new volunteers once they have been completely screened. The Archbishop's protocol office has been informed that the parish is now ready to receive the auditors from the diocesan insurance company.

Eucharist A Short History--Part IV

By Alfred McBride, O.Praem.; St. Anthony Messenger Press

6. MASS IN THE ERA OF VATICAN II

THE MOST HOLY Eucharist contains the Church's entire spiritual wealth, Christ himself, our Passover and living bread." Pope John Paul II, Ecclesia de Eucharistia

Pius XII's Mediator Dei (1947) lent powerful impetus to the liturgical movement. In 1951 Joseph Jungmann, S.J., published The Mass of the Roman Rite, that revealed the complex history of the Mass. In the United States, St. John's Abbey in Collegeville, Minnesota, supported the cause for liturgical change through its magazine Orate Fratres, "Let us pray Brethren" (now called Worship). Their roster of writers included all the movers and shakers who rallied the Church in America to the cause.

In other words, the groundwork was firmly laid by patient scholarship, hundreds of meetings and countless articles by the time Vatican II assembled. With relatively little debate and very small opposition, the Constitution on the Liturgy was approved by the Council Fathers 2,147 favorable to 4 opposed. The sonorous words of the Constitution reached a high point when it declared, "The liturgy is the summit to which the activity of the Church is directed; it is also the fount from which all her power flows" (10).

In the last part of the 20th century the application of the document began. A number of changes were introduced. The priest now faced the people. Vernacular languages replaced the Latin. People shook hands at the greeting of peace. The congregation was asked to participate actively in the Mass, to sing and pray at various times. People were invited to receive Communion either in the hand or on the tongue and to stand at its reception. They were offered the chalice so they could communicate under both species, the Eucharistic Bread and Wine.

Laity and religious could serve Communion as extraordinary ministers. Married deacons appeared, to assist the priest at Mass and to preach homilies. Entrance processions were added. People brought up the gifts at the presentation of the offerings. Priests abandoned what some called the "fiddle-back" chasubles for robe like replacements. Mass readings provided a three-year series of Scripture in which large sections of the Bible would be heard. Homilies, which had become lectures or announcements on most anything, were expected to explain Scripture and apply it to everyday life.

Church architecture became functional and minimalist in decoration, a sign of the times. Instead of the long "shoe box," a wider auditorium model appeared. Guitar Masses surfaced and new hymns were composed, leading to many arguments about taste and suitability. None of this happened without some anger and discomfort. Some experimentation went over the top. But in fact the amazing thing is how little disturbance actually happened. The dreams of the liturgical movement were fulfilled and expanded upon. People are realizing that they can enrich their spirituality mainly from the celebration of the Eucharist. What's striking is that the significant impact of all this is yet to be experienced. In Church years, we're very near the beginning of the Council's reforms.

7. EUCHARIST: ALIVE AND DYNAMIC

One conclusion we can draw from this sketch of the history of the Mass is that changes in the liturgy, whether large or small, have been occurring since the Last Supper. The basics have never changed, but the details, decisions by Church authority and the attitudes of the participants have undergone modifications and development.

In this sense the celebration of the Eucharist is a dynamic and living reality. While a constant diet of experimentation is not healthy or desirable, a loving attention to the quality of the divine celebration is a necessity. We certainly need to avoid frivolity, but we also need to avoid stagnation. The noble core of the Eucharist from the Upper Room to an urban cathedral or a village church has withstood the tumults of history and always will. For this we praise and thank God: Father, Son and Holy Spirit.
