Second Sunday in Ordinary Time

January 14 & 15, 2017

In the Gospel reading of today, John the Baptist declares that Jesus “is the Lamb of God who takes away the sin of the world!” Is our response to that one of openness? Do we truly believe that Jesus is our Savior? As followers of Jesus, do we hear God’s voice calling us to be compassionate and generous to the poor, and in solidarity with the oppressed?

LIVING, SUFFERING AND DYING... what for?

Catholic Organization for Life and Family - Part I

*“The enigma of pain and death, which outside the Gospel crushes us, is illuminated through Christ and in Christ.”
- Pope John Paul II*

As Pope John Paul II said, human suffering is a mystery. Sooner or later, all families experience it in the midst of life. It is either physical, psychological or spiritual. It always restrains our activities, it often limits our autonomy, and it sometimes seems to diminish our dignity. When it lasts too long and intensifies, some would think of ending life, which can appear to be a mere burden. Suicide, euthanasia and assisted suicide can then become attractive exit doors.

Yet Christians still maintain that life – daily life, with its joys and its sorrows – is a gift from God, given with love and kindness... Towards the end of his life and already weakened by illness, Paul-Émile Cardinal Léger, former Archbishop of Montreal, exclaimed while talking about nursing homes for the elderly: “So much unused suffering!” Useless? No. Unused...

Can suffering be useful? The discovery that it can be allows men and women to face suffering with courage and perseverance, knowing that they are achieving something for the Kingdom of God.

Where to find happiness

Since suffering and illness appear in the normal course of every human life, the question of their significance comes up in thinking about the meaning of life. Inevitably, the day comes when each person wonders: “Where do I come from? What is the purpose of my life? Why am I suffering? Where am I going? What is there after death?”

Christians find answers to these questions in the Gospel. It is there that they understand they are not the masters, but the stewards of their life. It is there that Christ nourishes their hope in the Resurrection and eternal life. This hope we must urgently share again with our families, friends and work colleagues, because all, more or less consciously, are searching for a purpose in their life. They seek happiness. No doubt about it: all of humanity needs Christ and his message of love, even if the world often seems indifferent to him.

World Day of the Sick 2017

“Amazement at what God has accomplished: The Almighty has done Great things for me...” Sunday, Feb. 12, 2017: February 11th is World Day of the Sick, an observation introduced by Saint Pope John Paul II in 1992. We take to heart Jesus’ special attention to the poor and suffering – and see ourselves as His hands, ministering to those who are ill with the same love and compassion.
