Fifth Sunday in Ordinary Time

February 4 & 5, 2017

Salt of the earth, light of the world. In today's Gospel reading, images of salt and light are part of Jesus' word to His disciples – and to His followers. The Gospel confronts us with God's gifts and invites us to claim them as the basis for our life. By our baptism, we are called to follow the Lord Jesus, to be the light that shines in the darkness, we are called to be the salt that gives new life to the world.

LIVING, SUFFERING AND DYING... what for?

Catholic Organization for Life and Family - Part IV

“The enigma of pain and death, which outside the Gospel crushes us, is illuminated through Christ and in Christ.” - Pope John Paul II

A call to solidarity

Only God could invent such a response to the mystery of evil. Only God could transform into good the enormous suffering that threatens to destroy us. It is his “love which creates good, drawing it out by means of suffering...” God stands by our side, helping us to face the illness that knocks at our door and to face even death, which will one day mark our passing into eternal life. God’s grace and the strength He gives us are always proportional to the challenges that arise in our lives. All we need to do is welcome His help. We are never alone. The conqueror of all evil, the Risen Christ, is always at our side – especially in the Eucharist.

Sometimes Christ also presents himself to us in a parent, a child, a friend, or a caregiver who consoles, encourages, and comforts. Throughout his or her life, each baptised person is called to be another Christ – Christ the Servant who walks with his friends and helps them to rise to their challenges, supporting them at the time of their suffering so that they remain courageous until the natural end of their lives. For Christians, this is the real meaning of “aid in dying”: it is aid in living until the day when God invites his child to come home. This call to compassion, to responsibility, to fraternity and to solidarity is also always a call to serve the suffering Christ. Christ who is recognized and loved in each ill person who is afraid, who feels alone, impoverished, diminished, overwhelmed, anguished, abandoned... “Whatever you did for one of the least of these brothers of mine, you did for me” (Mt 25:40)... Thus, to allow oneself to be loved and accompanied by another is to provide the other with the occasion and the privilege of serving and loving Christ.

One of the most beautiful human responses to suffering is indisputably that of palliative care, which never seeks to hasten death. By associating sophisticated treatment of physical pain with a personal accompaniment that is marked by attentiveness, tenderness and compassion, so many health professionals and volunteers who work in the palliative care units and homes confirm the dignity of the terminally ill. These admirable and model teams of human solidarity consider all the needs (physical, psychological, social and spiritual) of the people who have arrived at the end of their earthly journey. They invite the dying to continue to share the precious pearls of wisdom gleaned from their life experience, and help them to understand the meaning of their last weeks and their last days, until they arrive naturally at the most important moment of their life: their passage into eternity and their face encounter with God.

Open the door to eternity

No, suffering is not useless. And it does not diminish human dignity. Hanging on the wood of the cross, disfigured, unrecognizable, Christ was not undignified. At the time of our own suffering and death, we do not lose our dignity. Human dignity depends neither on the quality of our lives nor on our autonomy. It finds its source in God, who created us in his image and likeness and who calls each of us to live and die in the manner of Christ – to bring the world back to Him.

When we unite our lives and our sufferings to those of Christ through love, they become a prayer offering. We thus give ourselves the opportunity to bring those we love closer to God; in turn they may welcome his love and give their lives for others, walking in the footsteps of Christ, who is the Way to eternal life: “I am the way and the truth and the life” (Jn 14:6).

World Day of the Sick

"Amazement at what God has accomplished: The Almighty has done Great things for me..." Lk 1:49)

To be recognized on Sunday, Feb. 12, 2017.

February 11th is World Day of the Sick, an observation introduced by Saint Pope John Paul II in 1992. We take to heart Jesus' special attention to the poor and suffering – and see ourselves as His hands, ministering to those who are ill with the same love and compassion. We recognize all persons who work in health care, and honour them for their great passion and commitment. Let us pray in solidarity with those who are sick and those who serve the sick around the world. w2.vatican.va/content/francesco/en/messages/sick/documents/papa-francesco-20161208-giornata-malato.html

TF21: Thinking Faith Smackdown: Proselytism Vs. Evangelization

Recent exhortations from Pope Francis against proselytizing persons and cultures have resulted in what Brett terms 'calumny and slander!' as media outlets make the mistake of coupling this with the Church's evangelizing mission.
